GREENPOINT TECHNOLOGIES UNVEILS "SKYHOME 2010" - - YOU CAN TAKE IT WITH YOU

September 25, 2007

Kirkland, WA

Greenpoint Technologies, Inc. (GTI) unveils the "SkyHome 2010," concept design at NBAA 2007. Built within the architecture of a Boeing 787 Dreamliner, SkyHome 2010 represents the latest concept in ultra-luxury real estate, a live-aboard yacht in the sky.

"After listening to our clients we found that they were spending much more time on their private aircraft. They requested features that mirrored the functionality they expected in their home. In essence, the SkyHome 2010 concept was an exercise in design for an aero-centric lifestyle. Many of our clients have many homes around the world and they live in their planes as well. We included features like a walk-in wine cellar or humidor, a garage for the 'toys' and huge closet/storage space as uses of the Dreamliner's lower deck. With just under 4,000 square feet of usable space, the SkyHome 2010 design is comparable to a Central Park penthouse except this penthouse can travel at Mach .85 and the views at 43,000 feet are just fantastic," states Greenpoint's Creative Director, Greg Vander Houwen.
